Bombay

To you my eternal love and life -
to you mother of my children my dear wife Krishna
I am addressing a few words to express an emotional consciousness that is truth and a reality - Admitting all my faults and short-comings in many spheres of my life - domestic as well as worldly - where ever I have failed to ~~[illegible]~~ reciprocate love and affection from my very dear near and dear - It is not that I am not aware of all the feeling of Patronizing that is bestowed on me, but that in my maddening Selfcentredness I am unable to express - that as much as you all Patronize me my bondage to you becomes stronger than ever - May be it is this bondage that gives me strength to act and react in all directions of life pertaining to my very existence namely my work -

I am attempting to write to you -
How much of it I will be able to do I do not know
You very well know I am an impatient man.

May 2002

I met Raj Kapoor for the first time in Bombay in the mid-seventies. When you speak of the Indian Cinema, you speak of Raj Kapoor, an artist of extraordinary talents and energy—producer, director, film star, editor, musician, storyteller.

Known as the greatest entertainer in Indian films, his remarkable career over several decades echoes the highest standards of excellence.

I am pleased to pay tribute to this great showman and to extend my warmest regards to his wife, Mrs. Krishna Kapoor and to their children who are present here tonight.

With great admiration,

Gregory Peck
